Once again, the gun-grabbers are screaming confiscate, but fail to mention how many lives might be saved if there were armed people on the premises. Also, saying it is near a Planned Parenthood location is totally misleading and provocative, as the scene is over a mile away. It is, however near a golf course. – Shorty Dawkins, Associate Editor

San Bernadino law enforcement authorities report a mass shooting involving at least 20 victims just before 11 a.m. Pacific time. Local news reports suggest that there are between one and three suspects, wearing masks and possibly body armor as well.

Some media reports have indicated that the shooting is near a local Planned Parenthood clinic. However, the clinic is over a mile away from the site of the shooting, according to Google Maps.

12:40 p.m. Though the active shooter situation is still ongoing, Democrats are not losing the opportunity to weigh in on gun control, the National Rifle Association, and other pet causes.

The police scanner is reporting a search for a Black GMC Yukon and a shooter with a black mask.

12:30 p.m.: The Inland Regional Center has not reported on the shooting on Facebook or Twitter. Its Facebook page features scenes from a Christmas party.

The local police scanner reports a search for three suspects of unknown race. 12:03 p.m.: Fox News reports that local law enforcement authorities have dismissed any connection with the Planned Parenthood. All three suspects are believed to be armed with rifles and are all at large. Police are using a robot to detonate what they suspect may be an explosive device that was apparently left at the center. The local police scanner is referring to an improvised explosive device (IED). Authorities are also looking for an SUV that left the scene. The Daily Mail reports that MedEvac helicopters have appeared on the scene to evacuate victims to hospitals.
