

Thursday, November 16, 2006

Nursery Rhyme Police

The nursery rhyme police - parents to take lessons in reading and singing

By STEVE DOUGHTY and JAMES MILLS Last updated at 00:12am on 14th November 2006

Parents could be forced to go to special classes to learn to read stories or sing to their youngsters threaten their children's future and the state must put them right, Children's Minister Beverley Hughes said.

Their children's well-being is at risk 'unless we act', she declared. More here

Posted by Stewart Rhodes at 9:43 AM

Labels: England, Police State

Newer Post

Home

Older Post

Subscribe to: Post Comments \(Atom\)

