

Thursday, February 15, 2007

---

Derren Brown;The Heist, Includes a Reenactment of the Milgram Shock Experiment

Can he get them to rob a bank?

Click here for the full episode of Derren Brown's The Heist

From Wikipedia;

The Heist ; In the show, Derren Brown used his skills on selected participants who answered an ad. "Under the guise of a motivational seminar" (where they would allegedly learn Derren Brown's skills) . . . The idea was that after the conditioning they received, they would voluntarily rob the van of their own accord . . . There was no mention of the 'crime' to the participants, and they were not (directly) instructed to do it.

This programme also contained a reenactment of the Milgram experiment carried out by Stanley Milgram in the 1960s in the aim of selecting four of the most motivated of the group.

Posted by Stewart Rhodes at 10:47 PM

Labels: England, Milgram, Milgram's Shock

Newer Post

Home

Older Post

Subscribe to: Post Comments \(Atom\)

